Manager Schimpf, of the Astoria Brewing company, states that the output of his concern is increasing very rapidly, and that the demand for Astoria beer is becoming greater with every month. The members of the Columbia football team are putting in their spare time at practice, and when the return match is played with the Ilwaco team they expect to put up a stiff game. The contest at Ilwaco was an unsatisfactory one, neither eleven being in shape, but with plenty of practice both teams will be capable of producing a good quality of football. It is likely that some strong team will be secured for a Thanksgiving day game here, and a big crowd can be depended upon to see the contest.

Not for years have teal ducks been so plentiful as during the present winter, and the markets are kept well supplied. In Cathlamet bay the water is often black with ducks and sportsmen have no difficulty in securing good bags. The toothsome canvassback is not so plentiful, but wildgeese seem to abound in goodly numbers. Some few geese have been killed on the plains, but they will be more numerous later on.

The secretary of the Oregon Bar association, which is to meet in Portland November 18 and 19, has prepared a program for the convention. In speaking of the approaching sessions A. F. Flegal, the secretary, said that the executive committees have decided to limit the addresses and papers to four—two for each day. This is done so there will be more time in which to go about business for which the association is to meet. The object of the association is to introduce certain changes in the code governing the rules of practice.

The musical force-comedy "Finnigan's Ball," will be the attraction at Fishers opera house next Tuesday evening. Finnigan's Ball is a "High-Ball" made from true Irish mirth, spiced with clean wit, effervescent with sparkling song, from the pretty lips of rollicking colleens. But unlike other high-balls its intoxication does not send one home to beat his wife, but rather to see new beauty in everything, to make tomorrow's work seem lighter and life more worth the living. Secure your seats Monday morning at Griffin & Reed's.

The registration books for the December city election will be opened tomorrow at Auditor Nelson's office. All persons who expect to vote must again go through the formality of registering no matter how many times they have previously registered. Voters should not neglect to acquaint themselves with the information that they will be required to give. They must state their names, ages, occupations, date and place of naturalization if foreign born, places of residence and duration of residence in their respective wards. The registration books will be open from November 1 to December 6. The time for registering is short, so voters must not delay in observing the formality.

The recent alleged attempt of the Portland sailor boarding house men to entice a man from the British ship Morven has resulted in action being brought in the United States circuit court by William Hughes, master of the ship to enforce certain of the runners from interfering in any way with his men and to prevent them retaining his vessel in port. The injunction prayed for includes in its specifications Peter Grant, Lawrence Sulullivan "Mysterious Billy" Smith and the White Brothers. The cases of the Whites and Smith, now under arrest for assault and battery, was to have been heard yesterday in the municipal court but the men were required to appear in the United States circuit court as witnesses, and so the hearing was postponed. The case is attracting considerable attention and the outcome will be watched for with interest.

It is reported that John Kopp Jr. and N. D. Bain have withdrawn from the Astoria Fir company, recently organized for the purpose of building a mill in the east end. Mr. Kopp was to have taken a $25,000 interest in the concern. The disagreement is said to have resulted from the valuation of $10,000 placed on the site by Messrs. Moen, Copeland and Jones, the original purchasers. A rumor is current that another party of Astoria capitalists is preparing to organize a company for the building of a mill, but details of the deal are withheld for the present. The joint manufacturers committee of the commercial organizations are figuring with still another company for a new mill, with every prospect of success.

The horse cannery belonging to Samuel Kinsman which recently burned at Linton will be rebuilt in the near future and for a time, at least, will can fruit exclusively, with apples to be made a specialty. This cannery was the chief industry of Linton, giving employment to 20 people, and its enforced cessation of operations is keenly felt by the whole community. The proprietor has secured an acre of land to rebuild on which is centrally located at a reasonable figure, with good time in which to pay, and the work of putting up the necessary buildings will be rushed to completion. Apples will begin to be canned not later than the first of December and it is expected that a good season will be put in. Formerly the chief end of the business was the killing and pickling of horses for the Norwegian market, but this hereafter will be done away with. Possibly later the handling of these goods will be resumed but those interested in the business deem it advisable to bend all their energies in the canning of fruit for some time to come.

A recent report issued by the traffic department of the Northern Pacific shows some interesting figures in the shipment of cattle eastward from points between the Missouri river in North Dakota and the Flathead country in Montana. It is shown that there is an increase of 50 percent this year in the shipments over that of last year. The exact number of cattle sent out from the points named is 58,000 and the number of cars used has been 2565. Last year 25,900 cattle were shipped and 1165 cars were brought into service. The difference in the shipments of sheep for the two years is not quite so marked, 225,700 and 110,300 being the numbers recorded. The difference in horses has been more slight. Up to October 1, 10,950 have been transferred in 337 cars while last year for the same time 9170 head were carried in 1944 cars. The increase is occasioned by the ranges, which were used by the stockmen, being settled up more thickly and developed for farming purposes.

There are two famous mechanical devices in the office of The Astorian.

The linotype in use was the first machine of the kind ever brought west of the Rockies. It bears factory number 578. For months this machine was on exhibition at the world's fair at Chicago, and attracted the attention of thousands daily who stopped to watch its marvelous workings. For about nine years the machine has been in operation and in that time has printed something like 129,900,000 "ems" of type or between 35,000 and 40,000 columns. Old age has incapacitated it at times, but the addition of new parts always has the effect of restoring it to its youthful vigor. A motor in the press room once furnished power for a car running between Portland and Oregon City. On its way to Portland one morning the car went through the Madison street bridge, and eight or 10 passengers were drowned. The draw was open at the time, but the gates were not securely fastened and opened when the car ran into them. The motor was fished out with the rest of the wreckage and eventually found its way to this office, where it has proved a useful adjunct.

Chinese lottery is one form of gambling that does not include all the evil effects attributed to other methods of "taking a chance." In Astoria there are two lotteries at the present time, and each has much play. The manager of one of the concerns, when asked how many people played his game replied that the number varied materially each night, but that many tickets were sold. There are two drawings daily, and the festive "seven-spot" is eagerly looked for by the players. This lottery is one of the simplest forms of gambling imaginable. The player is provided with a ticket containing 40 numbers, in Chinese characters. He marks out 10 of the numbers. The drawing takes place in the presence of many Chinese. Numbers corresponding to those on the card furnished the players are secreted under a bowl, and 20 are drawn out. A sample card is marked, with the numbers thus drawn, which are the winning ones. If the player chances to mark five of the winning numbers, he wins twice the sum played by him, while if he marks six numbers he wins about 13 times the amount played. A "seven-spot," meaning that the player has marked seven winning numbers, pays $4.50 on a 25-cent ticket, while an eight-spot nets the 25-cent player $22.25. For a nine-spot he receives $40.40, while a 10-spot pays $88. A 10-spot is unknown in this city. Tickets are sold for 10, 15, 20 and 25 cents, up to $1. A $1 10-spot would pay $3556. The Chinese are noted for shrewdness and many persons who are not posted would naturally believe that their lotteries are not conducted on the square. However, there is nothing about the drawings that could possibly be unfair, the natural percentage of the game being sufficient to net ample interest on the capital invested. Those who play these games do so more for pastime than in the expectation of making a killing.
